2. () The target was the HAGIA SOPHIA, once one of the largest Christian churches in the world and now a museum. The structure was first dedicated by the Emperor Justinian over 1400 years ago. The various domes and semi-domes which spot the roof of the elaborate and complex structure are accompanied by two slender Moslem Minarets accenting the fact that the church fell to the hands of Islam in the past. Located in Istanbul, the current structure lies on the grounds of the original structure which, like most of ancient Constantinople, was destroyed by invading armies. The two striking minarets were added in 1453 when the Church fell to the Ottoman Turks.

3. () Source began her initial descriptives in a very positive manner, stating that the site had a "circular, round" component with some of the circles, "not closed". Other concepts provided by Source in the early phase of the session included the fact that the site had a "big, white, alone" aspect to it with an impression of "moving, and a long, long, long, meeting area". However, at this point the Source had yet to perceive or at least, report, on the presence of a specific structure. This unusual fact continued for the remainder of the session. This became especially frustrating since the Source continued to provide further descriptives which may well have been directly associated with the actual site such as, "squares, little squares (tiles?)", "little flames (candles?)", "a special place, a special house, a place for the privileged", "stony, hard, big", and the color "gold". Source continued to perceive the concept of an important meeting to "seek a settlement", "discussions", and the idea of "messages running back and forth (prayer?)". However, no matter what tact the interviewer took, the Source continued to ignore the actual presence of this massive structure.

4. () In light of the fact that Source reported so many of the probably gestalts relating to this site, it would be improper to simply state that she failed to acquire the site. The reason that Source failed to perceive the huge structure is something that does occur from time to time to even the most experienced Remote Viewer and therefore must be looked as an anomaly rather than a failure. It is expected that as communication between the Interviewer and the Source continues to grow situations such as that cited above will probably become a rarity.

END

at first I sensed hills
rolling & I first got confused because there must have been an airport near by.

Then I sensed I was looking at a huge white hard stone object & I think it was a monument, or like a monument.

I sensed that there were crosses or cross-crosses that brought me up to the object.
I sensed there was a meeting.

I sensed men meeting.
I sensed half circles or people
in half circles meeting.
Special, privileged people.

I sensed art, jewelry.
Beautiful things to look at.

I sensed squares with prints on them. I sensed I was in a dark place sometime
and I was on the bottom.
